- US President Trump introduced a "baseline" tariff of 10% on imports from all other nations starting on 5 April, with higher "reciprocal" rates on specified trading partners deemed to have excessive tariff or non-tariff barriers from 9 April.
- In this report, we highlight in more detail what has happened, and our conclusion to balance cyclical and defensive exposure in our "Six Ways to invest in Europe" theme. We also highlight the respective weight changes as well as the three new names we added to achieve this balance: AstraZeneca, Enel, and Vinci.
- To effectively navigate this challenging environment, we recommend investing in Europe in a selective but still diversified and risk-return optimized portfolio using our theme, "Six ways to invest in Europe." Investors should see our corresponding regularly updated Equity Preference List for our selection of companies. It includes names that we believe are less vulnerable to tariff-related headwinds, while at the same time benefiting from the other positive drivers in Europe.

Post "Liberation Day"

On 2 April, President Trump made several major significant tariff-related announcements, imposing a 34% rate on China (54% in aggregate including the tariffs already in place), 24% on Japan, 20% on the European Union, and 31% on Switzerland. The president also introduced a "baseline" tariff of 10% on imports from all other nations starting on 5 April, with higher "reciprocal" rates on specified trading partners deemed to have excessive tariff or non-tariff barriers from 9 April.

The announced tariffs are more aggressive than our base case and can be viewed as an escalation of trade war risks. For this reason, we see a non-negligible risk of retaliation, inflation or a macroeconomic slowdown. We would note that inflation and growth could be impacted quicker than the Fed reacts, leading to near-term headwind risks, which could also affect other markets.

As a result, global equity markets have sold off, with the Euro Stoxx 50 down over 3.5% and the S&P 500 off by over 4.8% as of market close yesterday. Bond yields have declined, with investors focusing on risks to growth rather than the inflationary impact of tariffs.

Market uncertainty is likely to remain elevated in the weeks ahead, as investors consider likely downgrades to consensus economic and earnings growth forecasts, the risk of a retaliation in tariffs, and the potential scope for the new tariffs to be negotiated down. All of this is likely to mean an extended period of volatility for equities.

This report has been prepared by UBS Switzerland AG. Please see important disclaimers and disclosures at the end of the document.

Having said this, we see our "Six Ways to invest in Europe" theme as well positioned, as it provides a selective, while at the same time diversified and balanced, way to invest in Europe. It contains a significant proportion of stocks which are less vulnerable to tariff-related headwinds, in our view, while at the same time benefiting from the other positive drivers in Europe.

What do we think

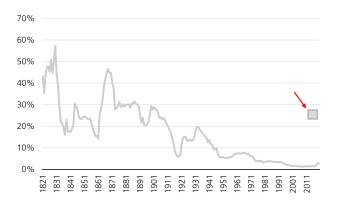

In the coming weeks, the White House's executive authority is expected to face legal challenges regarding the president's use of the International Emergency Economic Powers Act (IEEPA) to announce significant tariff changes. Businesses are likely to increase lobbying efforts, and political pressure to reduce tariffs may grow as economic costs rise.

Indeed, the US president has invited negotiations, and US Treasury Secretary Bessent even indicated that the announced tariffs are at "the high end of the number" and could be lowered through negotiations. Moreover, EU Commission President Ursula von der Leyen criticized the tariffs as harmful to the global economy and mentioned that Europe is preparing countermeasures but will seek to negotiate with the US first.

Having said this, the negotiation process may take time, and in the short term, the US could impose higher "reciprocal" tariffs if other countries retaliate. This is expected to slow economic growth in the second and third quarters. Before the "Liberation Day" announcement, the Trump administration's actions had already increased the US effective tariff rate from 2.5% to about 9%, the highest since World War II. If the threatened sector-specific tariffs are also applied, the effective tariff rate could rise by up to 15 percentage points, reaching a level between 20% and 25% (see Figure 1).

Even if tariffs are ultimately reduced by year-end, the impending shock and associated uncertainty are likely to drive a near-term slowdown in the US economy and reduce full-year 2025 growth to closer to or below 1%. We would also expect the Federal Reserve to deliver 75-100 bps of rate cuts over the remainder of 2025.

Trump's announcements on Europe have been more aggressive than we had expected, which increases the risk of escalation and a potentially weaker-for-longer macroeconomic climate. While difficult to quantify, we believe the second-order effects will be material, and they keep us from taking a more positive stance and upgrading Europe from our current Neutral stance.

What do we recommend

While we see limited near-term catalysts for the broad-based European market, we believe our "Six Ways to invest in Europe" theme offers an attractive way to invest in the region as it helps effectively navigate this challenging environment, offering a selective but still diversified risk-return optimized portfolio.

Investors should see our corresponding regularly updated Equity Preference List (EPL) for our selection of companies, which includes stocks that we believe are less vulnerable to tariff-related headwinds, while at the same time benefiting from the other positive drivers we see in Europe.

In order to deal with the fallout from "Liberation Day," we added three names to our stock list: AstraZeneca, Enel, and Vinci. All three of them add a more defensive tilt to our theme and balance cyclical and defensive exposure, while at the same time bringing stock-specific positive drivers to the theme.

Looking more closely at the rationale for adding these names, UK-headquartered AstraZenca helps us to reduce our underweight of the health care sector, while at the same time taking into account the more favorable treatment of the UK versus other nations. Italy-based utility Enel serves as a solid, more stable, non-tariff-exposed name in our theme. While we maintain a strong preference for the industrial sector and its respective individual companies with defense stocks our preferred sub-sector, we add French-based Vinci as an internationally exposed infrastructure company with very limited trade risks. At the same time, we streamline the individual weight of certain industrial names outside the defense sector, while we reduce the weight of banks within our theme to cope with the falling interest rates / yield environment we have seen. Please see Figure 2 for our current selection of stocks and their respective sub-theme exposure.

Equity selection system

UBS CIO GWM equity selection system

We provide two equity selections: Most Preferred (MP) and Least Preferred (LP).

Most preferred

We expect the stock to outperform the benchmark in the next 12 months.

Least preferred

We expect the stock to underperform the benchmark in the next 12 months.

Suspended

Sometimes legal, regulatory, contractual or best-business-practice obligations restrict us from issuing research on a company. This situation normally stems from UBS Investment Bank's involvement in an investment banking transaction associated with that company.

Global asset class preferences definitions

The asset class preferences provide high-level guidance to make investment decisions. The preferences reflect the collective judgement of the members of the House View meeting, primarily based on assessments of expected total returns on liquid, commonly known stock indexes, House View scenarios, and analyst convictions over the next 12 months. Note that the tactical asset allocation (TAA) positioning of our different investment strategies may differ from these views due to factors including portfolio construction, concentration, and borrowing constraints.

- 1. Most attractive We consider this asset class to be among the most attractive. Investors should seek opportunities to add exposure.
- 2. Attractive We consider this asset class to be attractive. Consider opportunities in this asset class.
- 3. Neutral We do not expect outsized returns or losses. Hold longer-term exposure.
- 4. Unattractive We consider this asset class to be unattractive. Consider alternative opportunities.
- 5. Least attractive We consider this asset class to be among the least attractive. Seek more favorable alternative opportunities

Equity selection: An assessment relative to a benchmark

Equity selections in Equity Preferences lists (EPLs) are assessments made relative to a sector/industry, country/regional or thematic benchmark. The chosen benchmark is disclosed on the front page of each EPL. It is also used to measure the performance of the EPL owner(s). Including a stock in the EPL constitutes neither a view on its expected, standalone absolute performance nor a price target. Rather, EPLs are meant to support the UBS House View, with the stocks included in them selected for their superior risk/return profiles.

Our selection is based on an assessment of the company's fundamental outlook and valuation, the risks owning the stock entails, including material sustainability risks and the diversification benefits it provides in an investment portfolio, among many other factors. UBS GWM CIO's selection methodology enables wealth management clients to invest in a specific investment theme or focus on a sector/industry or country/region.

The lead strategist is responsible for the CIO view on a stock, while the EPL owner(s) is/are responsible for the stock selection within an EPL. Stocks can be selected for multiple EPLs. For consistency's sake, a stock can only be selected as either Most Preferred or Least Preferred, not both simultaneously. As EPL benchmarks differ, stocks do not need to be included on every list to which they could theoretically be added.

Only stock views prepared by UBS Financial Services Inc. (UBS FS) which are compatible with the above equity selection system are provided. A stock cannot be selected as Most Preferred if it is rated Sell by UBS Investment Bank, while a Buyrated stock by UBS Investment Bank cannot be selected as Least Preferred.

Instrument/issuer-specific investment research – Risk information:

This publication is for your information only and is not intended as an offer, or a solicitation of an offer, to buy or sell any investment or other specific product. The analysis contained herein does not constitute a personal recommendation or take into account the particular investment objectives, investment strategies, financial situation and needs of any specific recipient. It is based on numerous assumptions. Different assumptions could result in materially different results. Certain services and products are subject to legal restrictions and cannot be offered worldwide on an unrestricted basis and/or may not be eligible for sale to all investors. All information and opinions expressed in this document were obtained from sources believed to be reliable and in good faith, but no representation or warranty, express or implied, is made as to its accuracy or completeness (other than disclosures relating to UBS). All information and opinions as well as any forecasts, estimates and market prices indicated are current as of the date of this report, and are subject to change without notice. This publication is not intended to be a complete statement or summary of the securities, markets or developments referred to in the report. Opinions expressed herein may differ or be contrary to those expressed by other business areas or divisions of UBS as a result of using different assumptions and/or criteria. UBS may utilise artificial intelligence tools ("Al Tools") in the preparation of this document. Notwithstanding any such use of Al Tools, this document has undergone human review.

In no circumstances may this document or any of the information (including any forecast, value, index or other calculated amount ("Values")) be used for any of the following purposes (i) valuation or accounting purposes; (ii) to determine the amounts due or payable, the price or the value of any financial instrument or financial contract; or (iii) to measure the performance of any financial instrument including, without limitation, for the purpose of tracking the return or performance of any Value or of defining the asset allocation of portfolio or of computing performance fees. By receiving this document and the information you will be deemed to represent and warrant to UBS that you will not use this document or otherwise rely on any of the information for any of the above purposes. UBS and any of its directors or employees may be entitled at any time to hold long or short positions in investment instruments referred to herein, carry out transactions involving relevant investment instruments in the capacity of principal or agent, or provide any other services or have officers, who serve as directors, either to/for the issuer, the investment instrument itself or to/for any company commercially or financially affiliated to such issuers. At any time, investment decisions (including whether to buy, sell or hold securities) made by UBS and its employees may differ from or be contrary to the opinions expressed in UBS research publications. Some investments may not be readily realizable since the market in the securities is illiquid and therefore valuing the investment and identifying the risk to which you are exposed may be difficult to quantify. UBS relies on information barriers to control the flow of information contained in one or more areas within UBS, into other areas, units, divisions or affiliates of UBS. Futures and options trading is not suitable for every investor as there is a substantial risk of loss, and losses in excess of an initial investment may occur. Past performance of an investment is no guarantee for its future performance. Additional information will be made available upon request. Some investments may be subject to sudden and large falls in value and on realization you may receive back less than you invested or may be required to pay more. Changes in foreign exchange rates may have an adverse effect on the price, value or income of an investment. The analyst(s) responsible for the preparation of this report may interact with trading desk personnel, sales personnel and other constituencies for the purpose of gathering, synthesizing and interpreting market information.

Different areas, groups, and personnel within UBS Group may produce and distribute separate research products independently of each other. For example, research publications from CIO are produced by UBS Global Wealth Management. UBS Global Research is produced by UBS Investment Bank. Research methodologies and rating systems of each separate research organization may differ, for example, in terms of investment recommendations, investment horizon, model assumptions, and valuation methods. As a consequence, except for certain economic forecasts (for which UBS CIO and UBS Global Research may collaborate), investment recommendations, ratings, price targets, and valuations provided by each of the separate research organizations may be different, or inconsistent. You should refer to each relevant research product for the details as to their methodologies and rating system. Not all clients may have access to all products from every organization. Each research product is subject to the policies and procedures of the organization that produces it. The compensation of the analyst(s) who prepared this report is determined exclusively by research management and senior management (not including investment banking). Analyst compensation is not based on investment banking, sales and trading or principal trading revenues, however, compensation may relate to the revenues of UBS Group as a whole, of which investment banking, sales and trading and principal trading are a part.

Options and futures are not suitable for all investors, and trading in these instruments is considered risky and may be appropriate only for sophisticated investors. Prior to buying or selling an option, and for the complete risks relating to options, you must receive a copy of "Characteristics and Risks of Standardized Options". You may read the document at https://www.theocc.com/about/publications/character-risks.jsp or ask your financial advisor for a copy.

Investing in structured investments involves significant risks. For a detailed discussion of the risks involved in investing in any particular structured investment, you must read the relevant offering materials for that investment. Structured investments are unsecured obligations of a particular issuer with returns linked to the performance of an underlying asset. Depending on the terms of the investment, investors could lose all or a substantial portion of their investment based on the performance of the underlying asset. Investors could also lose their entire investment if the issuer becomes insolvent. UBS does not guarantee in any way the obligations or the financial condition of any issuer or the accuracy of any financial information provided by any issuer. Structured investments are not traditional investments and investing in a structured investment is not equivalent to investing directly in the underlying asset. Structured investments may have limited or no liquidity, and investors should be prepared to hold their investment to maturity. The return of structured investments may be limited by a maximum gain, participation rate or other feature. Structured investments may include call features and, if a structured investment is called early, investors would not earn any further return and may not be able to reinvest in similar investments with similar terms. Structured investments include costs and fees which are generally embedded in the price of the investment. The tax treatment of a structured investment may be complex and may differ from a direct investment in the underlying asset. UBS and its employees do not provide tax advice. Investors should consult their own tax advisor about their own tax situation before investing in any securities.

Important Information About Sustainable Investing Strategies: Sustainable investing strategies aim to consider and incorporate environmental, social and governance (ESG) factors into investment process and portfolio construction. Strategies across geographies approach ESG analysis and incorporate the findings in a variety of ways. Incorporating ESG factors or Sustainable Investing considerations may inhibit UBS's ability to participate in or to advise on certain investment opportunities that otherwise would be consistent with the Client's investment objectives. The returns on a portfolio incorporating ESG factors or Sustainable Investing considerations may be lower or higher than portfolios where ESG factors, exclusions, or other sustainability issues are not considered by UBS, and the investment opportunities available to such portfolios may differ.
